Valley & vines

Millahue Valley has become the world's next great wine destination with the opening of 4325-hectare Viña Vik, about two hours outside Santiago, a companion property by the art-loving creators of Estancia Vik in Uruguay. Surrounded by vines, the low-profile winery is barely visible in the landscape as the vast fermentation and storage complex is housed underneath an artificial lake that's crisscrossed with walkways and granite boulders. Guests stay in the adjacent mountaintop retreat with 22 art-filled suites and a wine spa. On request, the chef will whip up a traditional Chilean barbecue picnic in one of the vineyards. And, naturally, the house red is blended right down the hillside. vinavik.com
